The question is when will the oligarchies collapse since it is nearly a century that oligarchy is rising and has reached to its extreme ugly top. My pessimistic view finds it difficult to go given the rising middle class that are chasing the oligarchs and are highly Divided and Hypocritic. My optimistic view says some day more people like me will manage to come together and Stand up against it.

Yeah Lin, you redefined Economics, Politics and more related to the management of the common pool resources.

Always remember the learning from your work and from the short period of interaction we had.

Yes, I believe in Less work!

How about Less Work done with full honesty and hard work!

Any day, more satisfying. Better Quality! Work/Wealth left for Others!

Corporate law professor Lynn Stout: "So, what does Wall Street do that benefits society? Doctors and nurses make patients healthier. Firefighters and EMTs save lives. Telecommunications companies and smart phone manufacturers permit people to communicate with each other at a distance. Automobile executives and airline pilots help people close that distance. Teachers and professors help students learn. Wall Street bankers help—mostly just themselves."

Charity work is really not even, even by the UN,...etc....forget about the CSRs... corporate philanthropy is a simple tax saving scheme with a feel good factor... why not earn less so that there is opportunity for others to earn...
