It only happens in India...

Visitors are good at destroying what they appreciate.. Absolute lack of sensitivity...

Solidwaste is Serious...

The ugly behavior of the visitors also tells their attitude... They don't belong there, so they don't feel before Littering... Very annoying habits Indian travellers have...Eating drinking and littering..

I bet if they are sent to heaven also for tourism, they will litter.. Look what they did to Meghalaya... and to several north and east tourist spots... Especially the central and west Indians have lesser sense of Cleanliness...

Sorry this is true.. And mind you it is also reflected in the society and politics..

I wish I can convince this to all the joggers and walkers in my country... If they do so even for few days they will at least reduce waste generation at their homes..

yeah,let us not throw... but even better is, let us not consume those rapped snacks, plastic bottled soft driks, gutka-water pouch....99% of the problem will be solved...and the best is, let us ban all those as a policy...100% problem can be solved....

i dont understand why it is difficult for a government to ban plastic bottled drinks, rapped snacks, gukta-water pouch.....all three are anyway harmful for human health...let alone harmful for the planet...

Sad and scary. Please reduce your waste generation. Please give up the packed wafers, water, and several wishful goods. And if you do keep them up, please personally ensure their recycling and reuse.

Where are we in % ?

Many of us segregate plastic waste at house level but after it leaves the house, the waste collector usually puts it in the same bin with other wastes...it is important to raise awareness among the households and the waste workers..

prima facie it is important to reduce plastic production, then consumption to reduce waste generation, then and then only waste regeneration can be successful.....

I was scared to nearly hell when a friend said that there is a large potential for increase use of plastic in India since we are not using plastic so much like other countries. The latter part is good but the former is not good as we are already unable to manage the 'not so much use'... Many companies including reliance are getting into big time plastic business in India. careful, reduce plastic consumption! save the planet and save the swachhta of the country!

Waste

long way to go in solid waste management!

more so because government and business and local community are not so much motivated and concerned despite resources (financial- swachch tax) available to address it! not because there are no solutions..

6 March 2017

needs start from minimizing waste generation and maximize waste recycle and reuse before discharge.....problem is willingness of the society to address the issue.....consumerism is the evil of all....atleast some people are involved at individual and institutional level....but we need more action on ground...

consumerism has to stop....to address most climate change issues....what is stopping nation states to impose ban on the many such products? short term vision, vested interests and consumerism ofcourse! urggh!
